World Championship Selection Trials Match Analysis

Observations

More consistent use of a structured cut-based game

Defensive use of the hand to redirect the opponent's front leg/cut and create openings for scoring punches

Right leg snake kick scored effectively

Left leg control enabled conversion from missed back kick into a scoring chigi

Improved setup of attacks through cut before execution

Scoring achieved with bada chagi and spin variations

Areas for Improvement

Drop in mental execution in the 3rd round despite physical capability

Court management under pressure requires improvement

Need for more consistent blocking efficiency in close range
